Uniform Regulations Clarified for Inactive Duty Reservists

The 1959 edition of U.S. Navy Uniform Regulations, the first new edition since 1951, will be released shortly for Coast Guard use with CG Amendment No. 1. In addition to the amendment material formerly in the 1951 edition, CG Amendment No. 1 also contains a four plate supplement of Coast Guard devices, insignia and markings.

One of the more puzzling uniform problems for reservists on inactive duty is where and when to wear the uniform. Here is a roundup of the rules based on the latest changes.

Officers and enlisted personnel not on active duty shall wear uniforms (1) when associated with or attached to an organized reserve training unit and attending a drill, (2) when performing active duty for training, with or without pay, and the necessary travel in connection with AcDuTra, and (3) when performing appropriate duty with pay and the necessary travel in connection with this duty.

Reservists ordered to active duty shall, of course, wear the prescribed uniform.

Reservists on inactive duty may wear their uniforms on certain occasions of ceremony--including military funerals, memorial services and inaugurations, and patriotic parades on national holidays or other military parades or ceremonies in which any active or reserve U.S. military unit is taking part.

Inactive duty reservists residing or visiting in a foreign country may not wear the uniform except when attending, by formal invitation, ceremonies or social functions at which the wearing of the uniform is required by the terms of the invitation or by the regulations or customs of the country.

Wearing of the uniform is prohibited (1) at any meeting or demonstration which is a function of, or sponsored by, any organization, association, movement, group or combination of persons which the Attorney General of the United States has designated as totalitarian, fascist, Communist, or subversive, or as having adopted a policy of advocating or approving the commission of acts of force or violence to deny others their rights under the Constitution of the United States, or as seeking to alter the form of government of the United States by unconstitutional means, (2) in connection with non-military activities of a business or commercial nature, and (3) under any circumstances which would tend to bring discredit or reproach upon the uniform.

Naval War College Announces Reserve Courses for 1961

The 1961 Reserve Officers' Command and Staff Course and the Senior Reserve Officers' Course will convene on 6 May and 28 May respectively, at the Naval War College, Newport, R. I.

Applications for the Command and Staff Course must be submitted via district commanders in time to reach Headquarters no later than 14 October 1960. Candidates must be Lieutenant Commanders, must have secret clearance, and must not have previously attended a Naval War College reserve courses. The two officers selected will be furnished, after 14 December 1960, a preliminary study course of one assignment, which will provide advance instruction in the fundamentals of naval staff techniques and operational planning. Solutions for this course will be due at the Naval War College prior to 15 March 1961. No point credit is authorized for the correspondence course, since it is a part of the two-week training course.

Applications for the Senior Reserve Officers' Course must reach Headquarters no later than 16 December 1960. Candidates must be in the grade of Captain or Commander, must have secret clearance, and must not have previously attended the course. World War II attendance at the Naval War College

National War College Holds Second Defense Strategy Seminar

CG Again Represented by 4 Reserve Officers

More than two hundred of the leading Reserve officers of the Army, Navy, Air Force, Marines, and Coast Guard reported for two weeks training duty in July at The National War College, Washington, D. C., to study the major issue facing the United States today: Conflict with World Communism.

The Coast Guard Reserve was represented this year by four officers, CDR Hugh A. Doyle, New Rochelle, N. Y.; CDR Raymond P. Gallivan, Whiting, Ind.; LCDR Lawrence E. Kelley, Moore, Oklahoma; and CDR Daniel H. Williams, Merchantville, N. J.

The Commandant of the National War College conducted the training and administration of the students. The seminar is sponsored and supported by the Reserve Officers Association, the Institute for American Strategy, and the Foreign Policy Research Institute of the University of Pennsylvania. A seminar was first held in July 1959 at The National War College and its success led to the one this year.

In the academic atmosphere of this highest military college in the country, the student officers were instructed by various authorities from government agencies, leading colleges, and the top echelons of the military services. Subjects discussed included the causes of the conflict, the objectives of its combatants, the techniques by which the conflict is sustained, and the measures which the Free World may take to maintain and increase its security and yet preserve its Additional lectures for the formal lectures, the students assembled in small seminar groups of about 10 to 12 to discuss further the problems we face today. The groups were guided by moderators, many of whom had been students the previous year when the original seminar, known as the National Strategy Seminar, was held.

The basic purposes of the seminar were threefold: To provide a better understanding of the current world situation for a select group of Reserve officers who are active in public affairs and can, through their position in civilian life, help to alert the U.S. public to the dangers inherent in the present international situation; to alert these leaders to the dangers of the cold war conflict which, though not so dramatic as open armed conflict, can nevertheless erode our defenses; and to strengthen the bridge between civilian groups and the military through the Reserve officer who is both soldier and civilian, and thus work toward a new dimension in voluntary partnership in defense between government and the private sector.

Reserve officers who were chosen to attend are prominent citizens in their communities in the fields of education, communications, government, religion, professional societies, and trade associations. Returning to their homes, they as citizens and Reservists will help to create a resolute and informed climate of public opinion throughout the U.S.

GI Loan Deadline Extended for World War II Veterans

If you are a veteran of World War II, you have until 25 July 1962 in which to apply for a VA-guaranteed home, farm, or business loan.

The new law, which extends the loan deadline for two years, also permits both World War II and Korean Conflict veterans to continue to apply for direct loans from the federal government if they live in designated rural areas where GI loans are not obtainable from local lending institutions.

In addition, the law authorizes VA to guarantee a loan if the application is received before the new terminal date. Formerly, the law allowed VA one year in which to issue its evidence of guaranty. This amendment thus allows the guaranty of loans applied for before the terminal date but which could not be completed within one year because of title problems, construction delays, and the like.

The deadline for GI loans for veterans of the Korean Conflict--31 Jan 1965--remains unchanged.

A New Recording For Your Collection

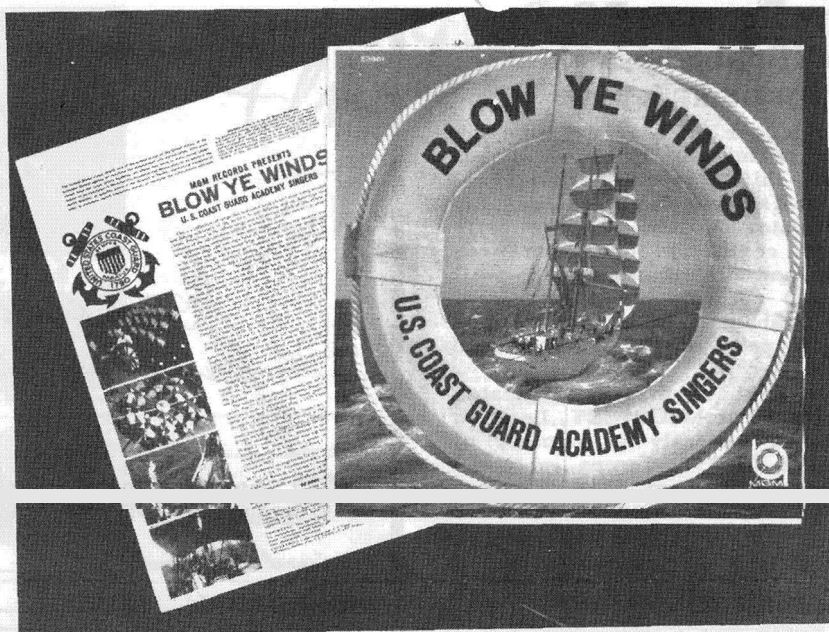

A must for the record collection of everyone who loves the sea is "Blow Ye Winds," an album of sea chanties by the 32-voice U.S. Coast Guard Academy Cadet Singers. The album, recently released on the MGM label, contains such favorites as Nancy Lee, Shenandoah, A-Rovin' and many others.

This is a collection of songs that sailormen sang aboard deep-sea wind-jammers and fishing schooners of the western North Atlantic and on American rivers and canals. Preserved in the robust songs and sentimental ballads of this album call the romance of the adventures of sailors--a unique species now approaching extinction--won their rugged fame.

The voices of this album are not just a glee club or a gang of singing sailors. The U.S. Coast Guard Academy Singers are a highly selected group of cadets who have built a reputation that many professionals envy. The 32 voices making up the Singers are drawn from over 150 cadets who regularly participate in musical activities at the Coast Guard Academy.

Coast Guard Academy Exam Scheduled for 20, 21 February 1960

The annual examination for appointment to cadetship in the United States Coast Guard will be held on February 20 and 21, 1961, in over a hundred cities in the United States and its possessions, and in a few selected cities abroad.

The new card application form, adopted last year, greatly simplifies application procedures, as it replaces the full-page application and the "Report of Preliminary Physical Examination." While this preliminary physical examination is no longer required, candidates are urged to check with their family physician before making application, to make sure they meet all requirements.

To be eligible an applicant must be a high school senior or graduate who will have reached his 17th but not his 22nd birthday on 1 July 1961. He must be graduated and have earned not less than 15 credits by 30 June 1961. Three credits must be in English, two in Algebra, and one in plane geometry, and of the remaining nine, not more than two can be in non-academic subjects such as occupational or commercial subjects, drama or music.

First Reserve Officer Awarded Distinguished Pistol Shot Badge

Recently, at the Northeastern Regional Pistol Championship matches held in North Attleboro, Mass., LCDR Wallace G. Angel earned his third "leg" and became the first Coast Guard Reservist on inactive duty to be awarded the Distinguished Pistol Shot Badge.

LCDR Angel has participated in the National Rifle and Pistol Matches at Camp Perry, Ohio, in past years and we are looking forward to good reports from this year's Reserve Team.

Physically, he must be in excellent condition, between 64 and 78 inches in height with proportionate weight, and have uncorrected 20/20 vision in each eye, with normal color perception.

An information booklet and application forms may be obtained by writing the Commandant (PTP-2), U.S. Coast Guard, Washington 25, D.C. Requests for booklets need not be submitted through channels. The deadline for submission of applications for the 1961 class is 10 January 1961.

Will There Be A Director-Pointer On Your Team?

The Director-Pointer is a very important man on any Fire Control Team--so important that the gun cannot fire accurately without him. And every gun on your ship will be needed if we should have to mobilize.

Let's all do our part to make sure those vital positions are filled. Bring in a prospective Director-Pointer and get him signed up or refer the recruiter to him.

Show him how he can help the Coast Guard Reserve and how the Coast Guard Reserve can help him!

New Reserve PO Certificate Issued For Immediate Use

No longer will reservists who make permanent chief receive a "make-shift" appointment certificate, adapted from the regular certificate. A new reserve petty officer certificate has been prepared and distributed, which will be used not only for advancement to permanent chief but for promotions to petty officer first, second and third.

The first of these certificates was issued to McGINLEY, Leonard V., until recently a member of ORTUPS 07-557, Tampa, who will become permanent Chief Engineer on 1 October 1960.
